The Annual International Finance Conference

International Financial Instability: Cross-Border Banking/National Regulation

5-6 October 2006

Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago

Cosponsor: International Association of Deposit Insurers

Financial stability depends in large part on appropriate prudential supervision and regulation. While banking has increasingly become international and operates across borders, prudential regulation has largely remained national and its jurisdiction limited to financial institutions operating only within national borders. This conference will identify implications of this mismatch for international financial stability and examine recommendations for mitigating any adverse effects.

Further information on the program and on registration for the conference will be posted on the IADI website as the program develops and conference dates approach.
